GENERAL/MISCELLANEOUS

U.S. Army Armor School Research Reports:

- Committee 6, 1951/1952, "Air Drop to a Tank Battalion." UC263A475.

Chap 3 summarizes several aerial resupply efforts of isolated units in ETO.

GERMAN UNITS, EASTERN FRONT, WWII.

See Chap 4 on German air supply at Damyansk, winter 1942; Stalingrad, Nov 1942-Feb 1943; Kuban bridgehead, Feb 1943; Cherkass/Korsun-Schevchenkovski, Feb 1944; The Crimea, Nov 1943-May 1944; and re-supply of 1st Panzer Army, Mar-Apr 1944, across Bug and Dniester Rivers northwest of Odessa.

Resupply p.2

See App. "Air Support of Encircled Forces," pp. 67-74. See also USAREUR Foreign Military Study #T-12 upon which the DA Pamphlet is based.

10TH U.S. ARM DIV, CRAILSHEIM, APR 1945

See Chap XI. Also for background, see Report of Operations: The Seventh United States Army in France and Germany, 1944-45, Vol III (pp. 784-85. #03-7-1946v3) and U.S. Army, VI Corps, "Historical Record, Headquarters, VI Corps, Apr-Jul 1945," 9-11 Apr 1945 entries (#04-6-1945v6).

See pp. 96-97.

BURMA, 1943-44,

Chiefly Long Range Penetration Groups and Siege of Imphal

And many other books in the D767.6 stack area on Merrill's Marauders and Wingate's Chindits, both of whom received supplies by air drop.

See Chap XVI.
Resupply p.3

See esp pp. 191-96 of Stillwell's Command Problems on air supply during the siege at Imphal, Apr 1944.

CHOSIN RESERVOIR, NOV 1950

Peripheral to the air supply problem, unless one is looking at doctrinal deficiencies.

See, for example, Chap 5, Chosin, Nov 1950.

KHE SANH, 1967-68

See Chap IV.

See Chap 9.

See Pt V.
