REVIEW OF EVENTS
FEBRUARY 1968

GENERAL

Action was heavy throughout most of the Republic during the month. RVNAF, U. S. and other Free World Military Assistance Forces first repelled enemy units which had attacked numerous installations and population centers during the South Vietnamese Tet celebrations, and then went on the offensive to destroy or neutralize the enemy forces.

I CORPS

Beginning on 30 and 31 January, the enemy launched attacks by fire, coordinated with ground assaults on military installations and population centers throughout I Corps. He was quickly repulsed from Quang Tri City, Da Nang, Hoi An, Tam Ky and Quang Ngai City, suffering heavy casualties. Fighting persisted in the Hue Citadel, however, until 25 February. North Vietnamese Army elements remained active in the Demilitarized Zone area throughout the month, conducting sporadic attacks and harassments by fire against Allied positions. Elements of a North Vietnamese Division attacked friendly forces at Cam Lo on 2 and 7 February. The NVA 325C and 304th Divisions remained deployed in the Khe Sanh area. On 6 February, elements of the NVA 95C Regiment unsuccessfully assaulted Hill 861, 3 miles northwest of the Khe Sanh Combat Base (KSCB), while enemy artillery, mortar and rocket fire was directed against the combat base itself. On 7 February, elements of the NVA 304th Division overran the Lang Vei Special Forces Camp and again attacked KSCB by fire. Nine Soviet-built PT-76 amphibious tanks were used in the attack against Lang Vei. Several of the vehicles were destroyed by the defenders before they were forced to evacuate the camp. KSCB was attacked by fire on other occasions during the month, but ground assaults of any size did not materialize. Casualties and damage to equipment at the base as a result of the fire were light.

North Vietnamese forces harassed Allied shipping during the month on the Cua Viet River in an attempt to isolate Dong Ha from waterborne resupply and secure a personnel and logistics infiltration route. In mid-February, the enemy, using 122mm rockets, attacked friendly forces in southern Quang Tri Province. Rocket attacks were also conducted in the Hue and Phu Bai areas during this period.
Beginning 31 January, the VC Hue City Sapper Battalion and the 810th Local Force Battalion attacked Hue from the west and south. Some 2,500 prisoners were released from the city jail, many of whom were impressed into enemy units to compensate for high combat casualties. The enemy was completely ejected from the Citadel on 25 February, although his forces remained on the outskirts of the city and presented a threat-in-being during the remainder of the month.

On 31 January, Viet Cong units, reinforced by NVA forces, attacked Tam Ky, but were driven back almost immediately, sustaining heavy casualties. Toward the end of the month, enemy forces were again contacted in the Tam Ky area, and once again they were repelled with heavy losses.

Elements of all enemy battalions in Quang Ngai Province were involved in the 31 January attack on the provincial capital. These included local force companies and platoons from as far south as Duc Pho District. The enemy sustained some 800 casualties in the actions which continued until about 4 February. During the remainder of the month, enemy activity was at a low level in southern I Corps.

II Corps

In II Corps on 30 January, the enemy initiated offensive actions in the cities of Kontum, Pleiku, Ban Me Thuot, Tuy Hoa, Ninh Hoa and Nha Trang. On 31 January, Phan Thiet was attacked, Dalat was hit on 1 February. Ground attacks were generally preceded by attacks by fire aimed at Government of Vietnam and U. S. facilities. In the larger cities, the enemy infiltrated his forces into the populated areas and launched attacks from within. Pleiku, Qui Nhon and Ninh Hoa were secured by the Allies within a day after the enemy attacks. In Kontum and Ban Me Thuot, where major enemy forces consisted of North Vietnamese units, the fighting continued for almost four days. After initial failures in Tuy Hoa and Phan Thiet, the enemy returned on 3 and 5 February, respectively. Except for Dalat and Phan Thiet, the enemy withdrew to their base areas after being repulsed. In Dalat, the enemy held strong points for about three weeks. Probing actions continued around Phan Thiet for several days.

In Kontum City, the elements of the 24th NVA Regiment and the VC 304th Local Force Battalion withdrew after suffering heavy losses early in the month. Enemy action was relatively light after that.

After hitting Ban Me Thuot two battalions of the NVA
33rd Regiment and a VC local force battalion suffered heavy casualties in early February. After the battle, the NVA units withdrew from the area, but harassing attacks by fire continued sporadically during the rest of the month.

The battles during the Tet period in the coastal provinces were not as severe as those in the western highlands. Nha Trang was the scene of the most significant action in this area as a North Vietnamese Army battalion attacked the city.

On 11 February, elements of two VC Main Force battalions were expelled from holding actions within the city. They entered the city again on the 18th, but after being repelled, withdrew.

In Phan Thiet, two VC Main Force battalions failed in their initial attempts to penetrate the city. Between the 3rd and the 18th, they again attacked and at times held sections of the city until completely driven out on the 20th. Sporadic contacts continued near the city during the remainder of the month.

Although the enemy generally withdrew from the urban areas after his initial attacks in II Corps, attacks against hamlets, villages and Regional and Popular Forces outposts, as well as attacks by fire against friendly installations, continued throughout the month.

No major contacts were made following the initial offensive, but the enemy maintained his presence near the urban areas.

In II Corps alone, over 7,000 enemy were killed as a result of Allied actions during and following the enemy's Tet offensive.

III Corps

In III Corps, elements of two VC Main Force battalions, two VC Local Force battalions and a sapper battalion began a coordinated attack on Saigon and the Tan Son Nhut Air Base complex. At the same time, elements of at least seven other enemy battalions were active within the Capital Military District. After infiltrating Saigon during the night, the sapper battalion attacked the United States Embassy and the GVN Presidential Palace. At the same time, the Main Force units hit Tan Son Nhut from the north and west while the Local Force Battalions entered Cholon from the west. Heavy action ensued in these areas as ARVN and U. S. forces organized reaction units. Military Police, National Police and units around the periphery of the city took the brunt of the fighting until the reaction forces arrived and broke the back of the enemy's attack.

At the same time, two Main Force Regiments of the VC 5th Division attacked the II FFV Headquarters at Long Binh and Bien Hoa Airbase. The attack was initiated by rocket, mortar and small arms fire, and then followed by a ground assault against the airbase. Both regiments suffered heavy losses and withdrew to the east. After having taken heavy casualties in the cities, the enemy began a number of attacks by fire in other parts of III Corps on 3 February. The U. S. base camps at Lai Khe, Dau Tieng, Quan Loi and Cu Chi were attacked with 122mm rockets and recoilless rifles.

On the 5th, the enemy tried to regain the initiative in Saigon. They attacked south Cholon, pushing to the northwest, but were stopped by ARVN units. On the same day, Free World Military Assistance and ARVN Forces began Operation THAN HUNG DAO. While units of the U. S. 1st, 9th and 25th Infantry Divisions surrounded Saigon, ARVN units swept the city. Surviving Viet Cong were forced out of the city, many being killed or captured by the Allied forces in the outskirts.

During the following week, VC actions throughout III Corps were reduced to attacks by fire and attempts to hold positions occupied after exfiltrating the city. A number of VC remained in the Phu Tho Race Track area in west Cholon and continued to fight sporadically until 21 February. One of the reasons action continued in this area for this length of time is because the track area had been designated well in advance as an assembly and rallying area, as well as supply base and field hospital. As units attempted to link up with their compatriots, evacuate their wounded and obtain supplies, they moved toward the race track where they were engaged by Allied forces.

On 18 February, the VC attacked 21 targets by fire throughout the Corps area. Province capitals, major towns, U. S. installations and airbases were hit with mortar and 122mm rocket fire. Song Be was the scene of a ground assault the same day, and the market place was occupied by the enemy for about nine hours before it was secured by friendly forces.

Elements of the VC 9th Division, which had moved from its normal area of operations north of Saigon prior to Tet, were contacted by Allied forces conducting THAN HUNG DAO as they attempted to move away from the city.
Intermittent VC harassments by mortar, recoilless rifle and 122mm rocket fire were conducted after the 18th, although ground contacts were light. Friendly units continued to sweep areas of enemy concentration, and daily contacts were made during the last week of the month.

IV CORPS

In the Mekong Delta of IV Corps, enemy forces launched coordinated attacks which started during the early morning hours of 31 January. During February, they attempted to maintain pressure on urban centers and solidify positions in the countryside, but these attempts resulted in more than 6,000 enemy troops killed by Allied forces.

Between 31 January and 2 February, the fighting in IV Corps reached an unprecedented level of intensity. During the first three days of the Lunar New Year, 13 of the 16 province capitals were attacked, and portions of the cities of Chau Phu, Vinh Long, My Tho, Ben Tre and Can Tho were held for periods of time by enemy units.

Despite some element of surprise gained by the enemy, ARVN and U.S. troops methodically re-established their control over these cities. As the fighting developed, it became apparent that the enemy had been amply supplied with new model weapons and ammunition. There was widespread use of AK-47 assault rifles and RPG-2 and 7 rocket launchers. The size of the enemy units had been greatly augmented prior to the offensive. Many of the enemy dead and captured were youths between 14 and 16 years old. Interrogation of the detainees revealed that many of them had been inducted only days prior to the offensive and had received the bare rudiments of weapons familiarization and tactics.

After 4 February, the enemy's coordinated offensive activities dropped off sharply. Friendly sweep operations around the major cities resulted in large numbers of enemy casualties. These operations revealed, however, that the enemy intended to maintain a threatening posture around the urban areas. The largest concentrations of forces were in the vicinity of Can Tho, where three battalions remained south and west of the city, and along Highway 4 between My Tho and Cai Lay.

Enemy activity between 4 and 17 February was characterized by sporadic attacks by fire on towns and airfields throughout the Corps area. With the exception of a ground attack against Bac Lieu City on the 10th (which eventually cost the enemy over 100 casualties), the enemy's ground activity was limited to harassment of outposts and watch towers in the rural areas. Binh Thuy and Can Tho airfields in Phong Ding Province were principal targets for attacks by fire during this period.

On the morning of 18 February, the enemy attacked eight province capitals, five major airfields and the Dong Tam naval operations base. These attacks were well coordinated and were characterized by a high volume of mortar and recoilless rifle fire. It is interesting to note, however, that the intensity of these attacks did not approach the level of the 31 January attacks.

Enemy activity decreased after these attacks and remained at a relatively low level during the remainder of the month. Friendly sweep operations and reconnaissance-in-force missions continued to make light contact near Cai Lay and Can Tho during this period, while the enemy devoted much effort attempting to interdict Highway 4.

In air action over North Vietnam, daily missions were flown by U. S. Air Force, Navy and Marine pilots. They struck major airfields, highway and railroad bridges, railways, boat yards, and other major lines of communication throughout the Hanoi, Haiphong and Panhandle areas of North Vietnam. Weather continued to be a factor in the air war.

+ + + + +

There were approximately 39,867 enemy killed during the month of February in the Republic. This is the highest number of enemy reported killed during any one month of this conflict. During the month of January, 15,217 enemy were killed by Allied forces.

There were 763 Hoi Chanhs during the month of February, (Military 615; Political 131; Other 17).

U. S., RVNAF and other Free World Military Assistance Forces casualty reports for February totalled 6,157. The breakdown of Allied killed is: U. S. 1,900; RVNAF 4,127; and other FWMAF 130.

GROUND OPERATIONS

I CORPS/III MAF

Some of the heaviest fighting of the Vietnam conflict took place during February in the I Corps area of responsibility as the enemy continued attempts to gain a significant military victory. Widespread attacks were conducted in the five northernmost provinces during the Tet period. Enemy forces, supported by Soviet-built tanks, succeeded in forcing the evacuation of the Lang Vei Special Forces camp, but were unable to bring the fall of Khe Sanh Combat Base in spite of heavy mortar, rocket and artillery attacks. The ARVN and U.S. defenders withstood the attacks by fire, and repelled ground assaults that were launched against them, suffering light casualties.

Operation SALINE was conducted in Quang Tri Province by a battalion from the 3rd Marine Regiment which is part of the U.S. Navy's 7th Fleet Ready Amphibious Group. It commenced on 30 January in an area centered 7 kilometers east-southeast of Gio Linh.

Starting at 0620 hours, 31 January in an action which continued throughout that night and lasted until dark on 1 February, two companies of U.S. Marines assaulted a well-entrenched enemy force 6 kilometers northeast of Gio Linh. The enemy force of unknown size occupied bunkers along a tree line, had well coordinated fields of fire, and was supported by heavy machine guns and mortars.

By 1400 hours, the Marines were in heavy contact with the enemy but could not advance because of .50 caliber machine gun fire. Bad weather delayed air support, but by 1800 hours, tactical aircraft were striking the enemy positions. At 2030 hours, the enemy counterattacked the Marines but were repulsed with heavy casualties. During the rest of the night, air strikes and artillery fire pounded the enemy force as the Marines prevented escape.

Contact with the enemy continued throughout 1 February with the enemy attempting to withdraw to the north. Contact was broken in the afternoon, but was regained at 1600 hours and continued until dark while tactical aircraft, helicopter gunship and artillery missions were directed onto the enemy positions. After dark, contact with the remnants of the enemy force was lost.

The cumulative results of the 31 January - 1 February engagement were 295 enemy killed (most of them on 31 January), 27 suspects detained, and 82 individual and 34 crew-served weapons captured.
Marine casualties were 36 killed and 164 wounded (medevaced).

Light to moderate engagements characterized the actions during the remainder of the month. The SALINE Leathernecks were credited with 280 enemy killed and 51 individual and 25 crew-served weapons captured during February. Tactical aircraft supported the operation with 115 sorties.

U.S. casualties during the month totalled 38 killed and 318 wounded.

One of the highest number of enemy killed during the month in a III MAF operation was reported by AMERICAL Division units conducting WHEELER/WALLOWA. They reported killing 1,508 enemy in almost daily contacts. There were 297 enemy individual and 37 crew-served weapons captured during the month. U.S. casualties were 104 killed and 479 wounded. Four hundred and seventy-nine tactical air sorties were flown in support of the operation.

On 12 February, an AMERICAL Division company came under heavy automatic weapons fire from an unknown number of enemy 21 kilometers west-northwest of Hoi An.

U.S. artillery and helicopter gunships supported the infantrymen and the enemy contact was lost at 1830 hours. The results of the action were 31 enemy killed. Three U.S. soldiers were killed and four wounded (medevaced).

Just prior to that action, the company had found fresh graves in the same general area containing 22 enemy bodies.

Another major contact during February took place on the 27th when ground cavalry elements attached to the AMERICAL Division hit an unknown size enemy force four kilometers west of Tam Ky at 1520 hours. While conducting a sweep of the area, the cavalrymen became heavily engaged in a battle which lasted over four hours.

The cavalrymen exchanged organic weapons fire with the enemy and directed U.S. Army helicopter gunships and artillery and U.S. Air Force tactical aircraft onto the enemy locations.

Continuous pressure was maintained by the ground and air teams until 1940 hours when the enemy broke contact.

A sweep of the area revealed 179 enemy dead. U.S. forces also captured 13 individual and one crew-served weapon.
U.S. casualties for the engagement were two killed and 14 wounded (medevaced).

Units from 1st and 3rd Brigades, 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) conducting Operation JEB STUART were credited with killing 1,725 enemy in many small actions during February. In addition, 581 suspects were detained and 295 individual and 78 crew-served weapons captured. Throughout the month, the operation was supported by 343 tactical air strikes and 39 naval gunfire support missions.

One action during the month took place five kilometers northeast of Quang Tri City on 5 February. Elements of the 101st Airborne Division were sweeping the area when enemy forces attacked from three sides.

Employing small arms and automatic weapons, the enemy force was also supported by mortar fire.

USA helicopter gunships and artillery missions supported the friendly units in contact. Contact continued until 1600 when enemy forces broke contact and withdrew from the area.

Results show 35 enemy killed. One U.S. soldier was killed in action and 27 others were wounded.

In another action on 7 February, 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) troops made contact with an unknown size enemy force which continued from 0855 to 1400. In scattered contacts, the Cav troopers were credited with 81 enemy killed. There were no U.S. casualties reported.

On the following day, elements of the 101st Airborne Division swept an area which had been pounded by artillery and aerial rocket artillery six kilometers south of Quang Tri City. The Cav troopers located 23 enemy bodies in area.

In two small unit actions on 15 February elements of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) and 101st Airborne Division killed 67 enemy soldiers. The first action took place 10 kilometers south of Quang Tri City when elements from both divisions engaged an enemy force, killing 11 of them.

In another action 10 kilometers west-northwest of Hue 101st Airborne Division soldiers engaged an unknown size enemy force. Results show 56 enemy were killed. Three paratroopers were killed in the action and 14 others wounded.
On 19 February, a company from the 2nd Brigade, 101st Airborne Division discovered three mass graves containing the bodies of 110 North Vietnamese soldiers 10 kilometers east of Quang Tri City.

Also on the 19th, 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) forces made contact with an enemy unit six kilometers northeast of Quang Tri City while artillery and tactical aircraft supported. This action resulted in 51 enemy and 2 U.S. killed. Seven cavalrmen were wounded and medevaced.

In an area five kilometers northwest of Hue, on 21 February, two troops of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) attacked an enemy force in a fortified village and met heavy resistance. A third Cav troop joined the engagement at 0700 hours. Heavy resistance continued while the U.S. troops employed artillery in support. The action continued into 22 February.

After the initial attack, Cav troopers continued to sweep the area and made moderate to heavy contact throughout the day. Cumulative results for 2-day fight: 163 enemy killed and 12 U.S. killed and 137 wounded in action.

Other light and moderate actions were reported throughout the month in Operation JEB STUART.

Enemy attacks by fire continued on a daily basis against the Khe Sanh Combat Base (KSCB). During the month, Leathernecks throughout the SCOTLAND operational area killed 586 enemy soldiers while conducting the operation in Quang Tri Province.

On 6 February, the Lang Vei Special Forces camp and KSCB received an enemy mortar and artillery fire attack. On the morning of 7 February, the main base area continued to receive artillery and rocket fire. The airfield at Khe Sanh was cratered but was fully operational at 1030.

The Lang Vei Special Forces camp received a heavy ground attack by an unknown size enemy force supported by nine armored vehicles (Soviet Model PT-76 tanks), heavy artillery and mortar fire.

Heavy contact followed while the defenders received continual artillery and tactical air support. An air observer reported the enemy was employing flamethrowers in the attack. Heavy fighting continued in the vicinity of Lang Vei until 1100 hours when it was evacuated by the defenders.

The following day, on 8 February, another air observer from the 3rd Marine Division observed four enemy tanks 10 kilometers southwest of Khe Sanh. Tactical air strikes were called in and two vehicles were reported disabled. About the same time 20 wheeled vehicles were observed by an air observer 14 kilometers west-southwest of Khe Sanh. Tactical air sorties were directed against them and at least two trucks were left burning after the strike.

Enemy forces shelled a 3rd Marine Division position three kilometers north-northwest of Khe Sanh on 8 February with an unknown number of 60mm mortar and RPG rocket grenade rounds and followed with a ground attack. The hostile forces were repulsed in bitter fighting by the Marine defenders. In this action 124 enemy were killed. U.S. losses were 21 killed and 27 wounded.

On 23 February, between 1300 and 1800, the Khe Sanh Combat Base complex received about 1300 pounds of enemy rocket, artillery and mortar fire. U.S. casualties due to all hostile actions during the day were: eight killed, 19 wounded and medevaced and 19 others wounded treated and returned to duty. Enemy casualties due to counterbattery fires are unknown.

Throughout the remainder of the month, action was characterized by light to moderate engagements with the hostile forces.

In Operation KENTUCKY, Leathernecks from the 3rd Marine Division reported killing 442 enemy during the month of February while losing 93 of their own. The ground forces were supported by 167 tactical air sorties and 774 naval gunfire missions throughout the month.

On 7 February at 1400 elements of the 3rd Marine Division engaged an enemy force two kilometers southwest of Gio Linh. The two forces exchanged organic weapons fire while artillery missions were fired in support of the Marines. A Marine company was inserted into the area of contact and the enemy force broke contact at 1800 hours. During the action 30 enemy were killed while U.S. losses were four killed and 17 wounded.

Three enemy tanks were sighted in the northern part of the Demilitarized Zone seven kilometers north of Con Thien on 16 February. Air strikes were directed against the tanks with unknown results.
On 27 February, elements of the 3rd Marine Division observed enemy soldiers trying to extinguish a fire in their position. The Marines directed air strikes and 16 recoilless rifle rounds into the position and reported that 26 secondary explosions had been set off.

Throughout the remainder of the month Operation KENTUCKY forces reported light to moderate contact with the hostile forces.

Operation MUSCATINE, conducted by the AMERICAL Division's 11th and 198th Light Infantry Brigades, was characterized by light to moderate engagements during the month. Three hundred and fifty-three enemy were reported killed at the cost of 13 infantrymen killed. Twelve tactical air sorties were flown in support of the ground forces throughout the month.

On 12 February, elements of the AMERICAL Division engaged an unknown size enemy force 10 kilometers northeast of Quang Ngai City. The enemy force employed 60mm and 82mm mortar, .50 caliber machinegun and anti-tank weapons fire against the attacking infantrymen.

Artillery and helicopter gunship missions supported the friendly troops. Seventy-eight enemy were killed while one U.S. soldier was killed and four were wounded.

Elements of the 11th Light Infantry Brigade made contact with an enemy force in the same vicinity on 23 February. Both forces exchanged small-arms and automatic weapons fire throughout the contact with the AMERICAL troops being supported by close air strikes.

Contact was lost at dusk, but the enemy left 68 of his dead behind. Two U.S. infantrymen were killed and 13 wounded and medevaced.

In Quang Tri Province, elements of the 3rd Marine Division conducting Operation LANCASTER II were credited with killing 236 enemy soldiers during the month with the loss of 60 Leathernecks killed. The ground troops were supported by 437 tactical air sorties in February.

As in January, hostile forces continued to attack friendly base areas by rocket, mortar and artillery fire throughout the month.+++
Action was reported as moderate to heavy throughout most of the area during the month. Operation MACARTHUR forces recorded the heaviest action as allied units searched out the enemy forces.

Action increased within Operation MACARTHUR during the month. Units of the U.S. 4th Infantry Division killed 1,103 enemy while losing 104 infantrymen. The operation, being conducted in Kontum, Pleiku and Darlac Provinces was supported by 1,155 tactical air sorties in February.

In one significant action, 69 enemy were killed on 27 February by elements of the 1st Brigade, 4th Infantry Division.

At 0800 the night defensive positions of the U.S. force were hit by an enemy mortar attack. At 0830 the U.S. positions received incoming small arms fire from the southwest. At approximately 1030 the enemy initiated a ground attack from the same general direction.

U.S. Army helicopter gunships and artillery and U.S. Air Force tactical aircraft supported the defenders, striking the attacking enemy and his avenues of ingress and withdrawal. Heavy contact continued until 1930 hours.

No U.S. casualties were reported in the action.

In another action, 21 enemy were killed on the morning of 26 February by other elements of the 1st Brigade.

At 0845 hours, two companies of the 1st Brigade were being inserted into a landing zone 19 kilometers west-northwest of Dak To. The lead helicopter was engaged by enemy automatic weapons fire and made an emergency landing in the hot landing zone. The infantry squad aboard the chopper immediately engaged the enemy with organic weapons fire.

The remaining aircraft proceeded to a nearby alternate LZ and inserted the remainder of the troops.

The main body linked up with the squad in the original LZ at 1215 hours, at which time the enemy contact was lost.

In addition to the 21 enemy bodies left behind, U.S. troopers captured one crew-served and eight individual weapons and a quantity of miscellaneous equipment, including 50 pounds of medical supplies.
U.S. casualties were one killed and nine wounded in the action.

Action remained on a light-to-moderate daily basis throughout the rest of the month.

In Operation BOLLING, members of the 173rd Airborne Brigade and the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) reported killing 97 enemy soldiers at the cost of 18 of their own killed. The ground forces were supported by 94 tactical sorties throughout the month.

No individual significant actions were reported as the U.S. units searched out hostile forces in Phu Yen Province.

III CORPS/II FFV

Action increased throughout the first half of February as enemy forces continued the Tet offensive in all areas of the Corps. Enemy action decreased as the month neared an end.

The highest number of enemy killed in the III Corps area during February was reported in Operation SARATOGA. The enemy initiated heavy attacks against friendly forces throughout the month in Hau Nghia Province but failed to achieve a single military victory of significance. Elements of the U.S. 25th Infantry Division reported 2,884 enemy killed at the cost of 290 infantrymen killed. Six hundred and fifty-six tactical air sorties were flown in support of the operation. The month's action was characterized by almost daily moderate-to-heavy contacts.

One hundred and five enemy soldiers were killed on 10 February, 17 kilometers north-northwest of Saigon when elements of the 25th Infantry Division in conjunction with cavalry elements made contact with an unknown size enemy force three kilometers northeast of Hoc Mon.

The U.S. forces were supported by artillery and helicopter light fire teams while Air Force tactical air strikes were directed onto the enemy positions.

Contact with the enemy was lost at dusk, but their 105 dead were left behind. Five infantrymen were killed and 31 wounded during the engagement.
Other elements of the division killed 98 enemy on 14 February in two separate battles.

One fight between units of the 1st Brigade and an unknown size enemy force began at 0850, eight kilometers southeast of Cu Chi and lasted until 1830.

The infantrymen were supported by U.S. Army artillery and helicopter light fire teams and Air Force tactical air strikes.

While killing 91 enemy, four U.S. soldiers were killed and 48 wounded.

In the same general area on the 14th, elements of the 3rd Brigade engaged an unknown size enemy force at 1035. U.S. Army artillery supported the infantrymen in contact until contact was broken at 1840. Seven enemy dead were found in a sweep of the area just before dark. Nine of the 3rd Brigade soldiers were wounded in the action.

Throughout the remainder of the month action was reported as light to moderate in daily contacts with the hostile forces.

Operation ENTERPRISE was continued throughout the month and into March by the 9th Infantry Division. During February, 468 enemy were killed by the infantrymen at the cost of 26 KIA. The ground troops were supported by 114 tactical air sorties throughout the month.

On 24 February, Operation YELLOWSTONE terminated. The operation was initiated on 8 December, 1967, and was conducted by elements of the 25th Infantry Division in Tay Ninh Province. Final results for the operation show 1,254 enemy and 135 U.S. infantrymen killed. Of these total figures, 340 enemy and 24 infantrymen were killed during February. During the month, the ground troops were supported by 119 tactical air sorties.

In Bien Hoa, Binh Duong and Long Khanh Provinces, elements of the 199th Light Infantry Brigade conducting Operation MANCHESTER reported killing 250 enemy before they terminated the operation on 17 February. The operation was initiated on 18 December 1967. The final results for the operation are: 456 enemy killed at the cost of 37 U.S. infantrymen. During the month, 13 infantrymen were killed while searching out the hostile forces. The ground forces were supported by 15 tactical air sorties.

Light and widely scattered actions were reported throughout the area after the Tet offensive diminished. The only significant actions reported during the month were by elements of the 9th Infantry Division in Operation CORONADO XI, which was initiated on 14 February.

CORONADO X, initiated on 18 January, was terminated on 13 February with final results of 334 enemy killed while U.S. losses were 12 killed. The operation was conducted by elements of the 9th Infantry Division in Kien Hoa Province.

During the month, 333 enemy were killed at the cost of 11 infantrymen. Sixty-six tactical air sorties supported the ground forces.

Operation CORONADO XI was initiated on 14 February by elements of the 9th Infantry Division in Phong Dinh Province. During February 264 enemy were killed with the loss of 39 infantrymen. The operation was supported by 105 tactical air sorties throughout the month.

Shortly after noon on 22 February, elements of the Mobile Riverine Force, supported by helicopter gunships, killed 60 enemy, 30 kilometers south-southwest of Can Tho.

While conducting a sweep along a canal, infantrymen of the U.S. Army's 2nd Brigade, 9th Infantry Division, embarked in rivercraft of the U.S. Navy's Task Force 117, discovered an enemy bunker complex. The complex was assaulted and a fire fight developed. During the engagement, the enemy attempted to flee their positions and were taken under fire by helicopter gunships.

The area of contact was swept after contact was lost, and the 60 enemy bodies were found. Thirty-eight of the enemy killed were credited to the helicopter gunship crews.

Four suspects were detained and two individual weapons taken. U.S. casualties were four wounded.

Fifty-seven more enemy were killed on 26 February by elements of the Mobile Riverine Force in an area five kilometers west of Can Tho.

At 0937, a company from the 2nd Brigade, 9th Infantry Division air-assaulted into a hot landing zone and became engaged with an estimated reinforced enemy company.

At about the same time a battalion from the 2nd Brigade moved to the south of the area of contact in U.S. Navy Task Force 117 river-craft. At 1245, a company landed from river-craft to the west, and another company air-assaulted to the east.

The engagement continued throughout the day, before contact terminated about dark. Artillery and tactical aircraft supported the units in contact throughout the engagement. Task Force 117 fire-support river-craft also assisted in the attack.

While killing the 57 enemy, 26 U.S. soldiers were killed and 51 wounded.
AIR OPERATIONS

AIR NORTH

Although poor weather remained a major factor over North Vietnam during February, U.S. Air Force, Marine Corps and Navy crews continued to strike major airfields, railroad and highway bridges, storage areas and lines of communication throughout the Hanoi, Haiphong and Panhandle areas. Bomb damage assessment during the month was limited and many strikes employed radar bombing techniques.

During the month, U.S. Air Force pilots flew 997 missions over North Vietnam, Marine Corps aviators flew 786, while the Navy logged another 307 for a total of 2,090 missions.

+++ U.S. Air Force pilots reported destroying or damaging 52 waterborne supply craft and 19 enemy structures in the Panhandle area while flying 42 missions on 1 February.

The following day other Air Force pilots struck two army barracks areas 69 kilometers west-northwest and 88 kilometers northwest of Hanoi.

Hoa Lac airfield and the Thai Nguyen steel complex were struck by Air Force pilots on 4 February using radar bombing techniques. Other strikes were flown in the Panhandle region, but poor weather prevented bomb damage assessment.

On 5 February, an Air Force F-4 Phantom crew claimed downing a MIG-21. On the same day an Air Force F-105 was downed northwest of Hanoi by a MIG-21.

Another MIG-21 was downed by an Air Force F-4 Phantom crew west of Hanoi on 6 February.

On 9 February, Air Force pilots reported striking the Kep airfield 60 kilometers northeast of Hanoi, but poor weather prevented bomb damage assessment.

Phuc Yen airfield and the Thai Nguyen thermal power plant were struck on 10 February as Air Force pilots flew 35 missions over the North.

Air Force pilots hit the Kep airfield 60 kilometers northeast of Hanoi and the Yen Bai airfield 125 kilometers northwest of Hanoi. They also destroyed a 40-foot barge, a truck and seven military structures in the Panhandle area.

A U.S. Air Force F-4 Phantom crew was credited with a MIG-21 down north of Hanoi on 12 February. The MIG was downed by an air-to-air missile. On the 13th other Phantom crews downed two MIG-17s northwest of Hanoi.

On 14 February, Air Force pilots struck the Canal des Rapides railroad and highway bridge, Thai Nguyen thermal power plant, Phuc Yen airfield and the Hoa Loc airfield. An Air Force F-105 Thunderchief was downed by ground fire. The pilots are missing in action.

Kep airfield was hit by Air Force pilots on 15 February as were roads north of Vinh and other targets in the Panhandle. An Air Force F-4 Phantom was downed by ground fire and the pilots are missing in action.

Direct hits were reported on the south end of the main runway at Hoa Lac airfield on 16 February by Air Force pilots.

The following day pilots returned to the North to strike the Phuc Yen airfield, and returned on 18 February to strike the Yen Bai airfield. On 19 February, Air Force pilots struck both targets again.

On 22 February, Air Force pilots conducted strikes against the Hoa Lac airfield, and radar sites, artillery sites and truck parks throughout North Vietnam. Two days later, on 24 February, other pilots struck the Kep airfield.

The Hanoi motor vehicle maintenance area 7 kilometers west of Hanoi was hit for the first time on the last day of the month by Air Force pilots.

+++ U.S. Navy aviators struck enemy targets throughout North Vietnam during the first week of February hitting airfields, bridges, storage areas and lines of communication in the Panhandle, Haiphong and Hanoi areas. Most bomb damage assessment was not available due to overcast skies.

On 9 February, other Navy crews reported strikes against the Cat Bi airfield 7 kilometers southeast of Haiphong. The next day, on 10 February, Navy pilots hit the radio communications receiver station 17 kilometers south of Hanoi for the first time.
Throughout the Panhandle region on 11 February, Navy ordnance destroyed or damaged several trucks in scattered locations. The following day Navy aviators struck the Minh Binh railroad yard.

While flying nine missions over the North on 13 February, Navy pilots attacked the Kien Hoa airfield 10 kilometers southwest of Haiphong and cut the runway at the Bai Thuong airfield 35 kilometers northwest of Thanh Hoa.

On 14 February, the Cat Bi airfield and Port Redon boat facility 19 kilometers north-northeast of Haiphong were targets for Navy crews. The next day while flying missions over the North, a Navy F-4 Phantom was downed by unknown causes. The pilots are listed as missing.

Uong Bi thermal power plant was struck by Navy aviators on 16 February, but bomb damage was unavailable due to poor weather conditions.

Navy pilots hit the Cam Pha transformer station on 17 February, and conducted strikes against the Bai Thuong airfield and cut the runway at the Cat Bi airfield on the following day.

On 24 February, the Hanoi port facility on the Red River 3 kilometers southeast of the city was struck for the first time by Navy pilots. The next day other aviators attacked the Haiphong railroad yard and the Bai Thuong airfield.

Again on 27 February, Navy fliers hit the Haiphong railroad yard and reported touching off several secondary explosions at the Uong Bi thermal power plant.

On the last day of the month, Navy aviators hit the Ban Thach power plant, but bomb damage assessment was unavailable due to poor weather conditions.

+++ U.S. Marine Corps pilots carried out strikes against enemy targets throughout the Panhandle region during the month. Bomb damage assessment was generally unavailable due to poor weather conditions over the North and due to darkness on night strikes.

Kep airfield, 19 kilometers north-northeast of Haiphong, was struck by Marine Corps pilots on 14 February as they flew 24 missions over the North.

On 17 February, other Marine Corps aviators attacked the Vinh airfield. The following day, other pilots hit the Phuc Yen airfield.
The Hanoi radio station 5 kilometers west of Bac Mai airfield was struck on 24 February.

During the remainder of the month Marine Corps aviators concentrated against targets in the Panhandle region.

AIR SOUTH

U.S. Air Force pilots flew 11,501 tactical air sorties throughout the Republic of Vietnam in support of Allied ground forces. Marine Corps pilots logged 6,595 sorties and Navy pilots added another 1,863 for a total of 19,509 tactical air sorties during the month.

The air crews reported killing more than 520 enemy while destroying or damaging 325 sampans, numerous emplacements and artillery, mortar and automatic weapons positions. Their air-delivered ordnance also resulted in over 449 secondary explosions and more than 260 fires during the month.

One hundred and sixty-six missions were flown during the month by Air Force B-52 crews from the 28th Bombardment Wing, Ellsworth Air Force Base, South Dakota; 91st Bombardment Wing, Glasgow Air Force Base, Montana; 92nd Strategic Aerospace Wing, Fairchild Air Force Base, Washington; and the 509th Bombardment Wing, Pease Air Force Base, New Hampshire. Of these missions, 111 were directed against targets in the Khe Sanh battle area.

NAVAL OPERATIONS

NAVAL GUNFIRE NORTH VIETNAM

Seventh Fleet units conducting SEA DRAGON operations along the coast of North Vietnam continued to deprive the enemy of the use of coastal areas and tidal waters to move his supplies to the south.

During the month, the ships destroyed or damaged 16 waterborne supply craft, ignited eight secondary explosions and fires, damaged four artillery sites, suppressed two anti-aircraft emplacements, damaged one wharf, bombarded three highway bridges, sliced two road segments, and pounded 12 coastal defense sites.

While firing on a concentration of waterborne supply craft 37 kilometers north-northwest of Dong Hoi on Sunday, 4 February, the destroyer USS HOEL was engaged by coastal defense sites 10 kilometers up the coast.

The HOEL, in company with another Seventh Fleet destroyer, commenced counterbattery fire, suppressing the site. The other destroyer silenced two additional sites in the area. Neither ship was hit during the encounter.

Three days later, on Wednesday, 7 February, the two destroyers were again taken under fire. The HOEL was firing on a highway bridge, while the other was providing suppression gunfire on known defense sites in the area, when they received hostile fire from a shore position 26 kilometers south-southeast of Dong Hoi.

The destroyers immediately commenced counterbattery fire on the enemy battery. An airborne spotter observed one secondary explosion at the gun emplacement. Neither ship was hit during the exchange of fire.

NAVAL GUNFIRE DEMILITARIZED ZONE

Supporting Allied troops south of the buffer zone in February, cruisers and destroyers of the U.S. Seventh Fleet fired on enemy artillery sites, mortar and rocket positions and bunker areas in the Demilitarized Zone.

The ships shelled a total of 34 artillery sites, 23 mortar and rocket positions and two bunker complexes. They reported silencing 14 artillery and two mortar emplacements, destroying one and having excellent coverage on 10 others.

Their gunfire also ignited 18 secondary explosions, two fires, destroyed seven waterborne supply craft, four support buildings, and five bunkers, damaged four supply boats, and four support buildings, and silenced one anti-aircraft site.

NAVAL GUNFIRE REPUBLIC OF VIETNAM

Enemy troop concentrations, bunkers, positions and gun sites were the primary targets for Seventh Fleet ships operating off the coasts of South Vietnam during the month of February.

The destroyer USS JOHNSTON on Monday, 12 February, fired on an enemy force 4 kilometers southeast of Gio Linh killing 22 enemy troops. The enemy soldiers were using the area as an assembly point for further movement.

The USS WALKER caught North Vietnamese Army troops in the open 5 kilometers southeast of the Marine outpost of Gio Linh and shelled them with five-inch projectiles. At least two of the enemy soldiers were killed by the destroyer's gunfire on Monday, 19 February.

On the same day, the cruiser USS CANBERRA unleashed her big eight-inch guns on enemy positions near Hue. Many enemy troops were reported killed when the cruiser bombarded a Viet Cong position 7 kilometers west of the ancient capital.

Eight secondary explosions were triggered on Monday, 26 February as a rocket-firing ship delivered her firepower on enemy bunkers, supply areas, and fortified positions in an area about 31 kilometers south-southeast of Da Nang.

Her rockets also destroyed 33 enemy fortifications and damaged 35; destroyed or damaged eight sampans; destroyed two bunkers; and collapsed 190 meters of trenchline.

Twenty-two secondary explosions erupted on Tuesday, 27 February, when the ship fired her rockets at enemy emplacements 31 kilometers southeast and 36 kilometers east-southeast of Quang Tri City. Shipboard personnel and an airborne spotter observed and heard all the blasts, 19 of which took place after the ship had ceased firing.
Airborne and ground spotters also reported the ships destroyed 259 enemy fortifications during the month and damaged 253; ignited 40 secondary explosions and 16 fires; destroyed or damaged 18 sampans and 11 waterborne supply craft; destroyed seven automatic weapons positions; silenced three gun sites; and collapsed 90 meters of trench.
