Notebook Letter

The following were extracted from a notebook written in Chinese by a Vietnamese officer at the time the report was written.

- The important targets which have to be destroyed are: airport; ammunition storages, barracks, firemen, care, concentrated places, important American offices, and the Ministry of National Defense etc...

- The men to be killed are: American officers, soldiers and technicians, the KPs, high Vietnamese personnel, US personnel at bases and camps etc...

- Every time the enemy is careless we must attack them immediately so we have to prepare weapons and always keep plans in mind.

- A good example (how to kill the enemy): In ### Summary

- Steal the enemy's weapons to kill them.
- Use strong poison needles to kill Americans who walk alone in the street.
- Find a place to hide grenades all around the target width we plan to destroy. (Avoid danger of transportation).
- How do we keep secret about organizational systems? Do not say anything to parents, friends, and relatives.
- Make secret signals to communicate.
- Memorize all the streets, especially small streets around the home and the district you live in.
- When walking in the street with weapons, send a courier to go before you to see if there is any police car.
- In the street or in a crowd, don't say hello to any courier you meet.
- Always pay attention to see if there is someone following you. From time to time bend over to fasten your shoelaces or look at the shopwindow. "Keep activities secret."
- Don't tell the whole plan to your couriers, only to those who are in charge of work.
- Prepare a secret place to store firearms, then a safe, but secret place for couriers to take shelter.
- Socially, clarify the secret signals of advancing, fighting, and retreating.
- Dispose of the important documents carried by you so that your enemy can't find them.
- Never use real names. For rewriting, use cover words such as: fish in water for spy ship, squares for aircraft, crabs for cars.

There are many other ways to teach couriers to fool the enemy.
